

Create Endlessly

Treat everything as a stream of becoming. Life is fluid, ever-changing, and so should your art be. Don't get caught up in perfectionism. Instead, focus on creating what brings you joy. Keep moving, keep experimenting, and let your creativity flow freely.

Make Art from a State of Abundance

The best art comes from a place of abundance—when you're in good health, feeling joyful, and deeply connected to the world around you. This is when your creativity is most vibrant and your perspective most clear.

"Allow your photography to evoke your feelings about the world around you."

When you create from this state, your work naturally carries the essence of your experiences, emotions, and worldview. It becomes a reflection of your inner abundance.

Photography: A Mirror of the Soul

Photography is a unique medium, one that reveals both the soul of the street and the soul of the photographer. It's a dialogue between you and the world, capturing the raw, unfiltered beauty of life.

"The goal is to continuously propel yourself into the unknown."

By staying curious and embracing the unpredictability of life, you can conquer the streets with your lens. Each photo becomes a piece of your evolving story—a testament to your journey through the ever-changing world.

Final Thoughts

Create endlessly. Let go of perfectionism and treat your art as a continuous process of becoming. From a state of joy and abundance, let your work reflect the vibrant, dynamic world around you. Stay curious, stay bold, and never stop exploring the unknown.