

Just Share the Good News

Contrary to popular belief, I actually think it's virtuous to share good news with other people.

A lot of people recommend staying quiet—keeping to yourself, not talking about your goals, your ideas, your confidence. But actually, by sharing your good news, your thoughts, your excitement, you become a filter to the world.

The people who are receptive to good news, those who celebrate with you, those are the people you should actually spend more time around.
