

Packing for Two Weeks in Tokyo (Street Photography Trip)

What's poppin', people? It's Dante.

Here's a simple, clean, no-fluff breakdown of what I'm packing for my two-week trip to Tokyo. One backpack. One camera. Clothing built for walking, shooting, and staying warm.

Backpack

- Peak Design Travel Backpack (45L)
 - 3 packing cubes
 - Tech pouch
 - iPad
 - Uniqlo hidden sling for passport, money, and essentials
-

Cameras & Tech

- Ricoh GR III (main camera)
 - Ricoh GR IIIx (backup)
 - GoPro Mini (for vlogs)
 - Extra batteries
 - Chargers
 - SD cards
 - Cables
-

Footwear

- Vivobarefoot Primus Lite 4 All-Weather
 - Vibram FiveFingers ELX
 - Alpaca wool socks (5 pairs)
-

Pants

- 2 Yohji Yamamoto Y-3 pants
 - 2 Uniqlo HeatTech sweatpants
 - 2 Uniqlo HeatTech thermal tights
-

Tops & Layers

- 5 black T-shirts
 - 2 Uniqlo HeatTech long sleeves
 - 1 sweater
 - Lululemon lightweight jacket
 - Lululemon down vest
 - Canada Goose winter coat (worn on plane)
-

Accessories

- North Face E-Tip gloves
 - Uniqlo sling (under-shirt wear)
-

Reading

- The Enneads by Plotinus
-

Extra Bag

- Y-3 modular duffel for photobooks or overflow
-

Final Notes

Everything fits in one 45L backpack.

The coat goes on the plane.

The Ricoh stays in my pocket.

Ready for two weeks of walking and shooting in Tokyo.

Stay tuned.